Paper Prototype 1

Immediately the person testing my creation knew to begin with start which would begin the metronome and then they would follow the steps to press the appropriate piano keys. They also knew that to end the process there was a stop button in the bottom right part of the screen. They were anxious to see the visualizer in action once I explained to them how it would work. The last bit of information they could figure out through common sense was the record and repeat buttons above the keyboard keys.
